

Healed From A Jaw Bone Lesion

"About 2 months ago I had some dental work done. During the course of treatment a full mouth x-ray was done and a suspicious lesion was identified on the x-ray in the jaw bone on the right side of my mouth. I was sent to an oral surgeon to have the lesion investigated by surgery. Before the surgery, I was sitting in church one Sunday night and the Pastor said that the Lord had indicated to him that there was someone present who needed healing in the area of their jaw bone and asked if there was anyone in the congregation who had pain or discomfort in their right jaw bone. The Pastor did not know about my jaw. I went forward for prayer and asked the Lord to heal my jaw.

The following week I went to the oral surgeon and he made a huge incision in my gums and flayed open the whole gum area where the lesion was on the x-ray. The surgeon dug into the bone, scraped away at it, chiselled it and even used an instrument that felt like a grinder to take away part of the bone looking for this lesion. He said "I'm so surprised; I can't find anything but very dense bone." He said it's as if the body (the Lord I say) had walled around the lesion with extra dense bone to completely encapsulate it. The surgeon said it would now not need any further treatment and would not be harmful to me.

I praise the Lord that he not only healed the lesion but surrounded it with a wall of protection so strong that the dentist couldn't even get through it. Jesus is still in the healing business Hallelujah!!!!"
